ANDRE MARIN, Ombudsman of Ontario – Conference Chair, Opening Remarks

A Accelerating Your Corporate Reputation through Corporate Blogging, Twitter and Other Digital Platforms

TAMERA KREMER, Founder and Creative Strategist, Wildfire Strategic Marketing

It can be difficult to establish a solid online presence. Maintaining a large social network can often seem like an impossible task or simply too much to handle and, in many situations, it becomes completely impersonal, doing more damage to your reputation than good. Successful organizations manage their corporate and product reputations using social media and other Web 2.0 tools. During this workshop, we will discuss:

- What is the basic strategy that builds value using social media?
- How can an organization use social media to increase business?
- How do you determine the communities you should address?
- How can social media help your Web site?
- How does social media form the "other half" of "normal" Web site marketing?
- How can social media work to build brand?

B Creating a Well Thought Out Social Media Strategy that Delivers Results

MIKE KUJAWSKI, Marketing & Social Media Strategist, Centre of Excellence for Public Sector Marketing

Social Media will have a significant impact on more than just marketing. Employers cannot ignore that the same changes occurring in the communications channels with consumers will also be happening with employees. In an age of greater transparency, the more dedicated, informed, and enthusiastic your workforce, the better the experiences created for customers and the stronger the brand.

- How can you utilize video marketing and distribution channels to reach your audience and drive company goals and objectives?
- Which social media tools should you be using and why? What are the new tools and platforms that are making their way into the spotlight?
- How can you go about changing your corporate culture to encourage social media usage? Do you want to? Why or why not?
- How do you deal with social media obstacles?
- What are the different ways that you can use social media to build relationships with your users and with your employees and stakeholders?

C Crisis Communication: What Every Communications Professional Needs to Know

JOEL LEVESQUE, Vice-President Public Affairs, Moosehead Breweries

You get the call on a Sunday afternoon. The worst has happened and it is about to hit the headlines. Your organization's reputation and future now hinge on your next decisions. This workshop uses expert advice and real-life examples to provide communications professionals with practical tips and advise on how to deal with bad news. During this workshop we will discuss:

- Putting Crisis Management on your organization's agenda
- Developing the disaster plan
- What you need when a crisis hits
- Creating a crisis communications' checklist
- Saving and enhancing your organization's reputation in a crisis
- Who are your audiences?
- The three "Rs" of crisis communications – Crisis or opportunity?

- What are your business objectives for listening, engaging & supporting community?
- Explore strategies for internal, B2B, & B2C communities
- Who should coordinate this effort? Definition of the emerging social media/community oriented role
- A review of compelling case studies to support discussions with executive level & stakeholders

A Roadmap for Social Media Marketing Strategy

MICHAEL O'CONNOR CLARKE, Vice-President, Thornley Fallis

Central to the notion of effective social media participation is the ability to create, publish and share content. This workshop will discuss the key elements of building the framework for a social media strategy.

- Audience - Listen and understand your audience and how they communicate/interact on the social web. What types of social networks, media sharing and assets do they engage? What are their goals for doing so?
- Objectives - It's important to consider both the goals of the company as well as the audience you're trying to reach. Marketing on the social web is about giving to get. Knowing what your community wants is key in reaching your own organization's goals because you're going to give it to them.
- Strategic Plan - What approach will you take to meet the needs and interests of your audience in order to meet your own? Will you engage influencers, will you energize brand advocates or will you create demand by offering non-branded resources
- Tactics - What social media marketing tactics and corresponding technologies will you use to implement the plan? Blogging, micro blogging, social networks, video, forums, blogger relations and outreach. There are many to consider.
- Tools - What specific tools will you use to efficiently monitor, communicate, create and promote social content? Word Press, Facebook or MySpace, Twitter, YouTube, etc. Again, there are many to consider.
- Metrics - How will you measure success according to the objectives you've identified? What tools will you employ and at what point will you take benchmark measurements as well as interval measurements? Who will you report results to in the organization and will there will be success metrics that you can share with the community that you're engaging?

B Search Engine Optimization in a Digital World

ALAN K'NECHT, Founder & President, K'nechtology Inc.

The user and power of search engines has been growing for more than a decade. More than 5 years ago the mantra became "Google is your home page". Yet even today public relations and communications professionals haven't adapted and grown with the changing digital landscape, unlike publishers who have moved to the web and embraced the concepts of search engine optimization. Today consumers and journalists alike use a variety for search tools to discover and share credible sources of news and information and unfavorable news. Can your news be discovered where digital media are looking? Does it stand out from crowd and notice of what everyone else is saying on-line? Is your text, image, audio and video content optimized for search and the social web? Learn how you use search engines to your advantage and to distribute your corporate message.

- Understand the new opportunities of search and SEO
- Plan and organize search engine optimization efforts for news, and other corporate communications
- Conduct keyword research
- Learn about the power of on-line press releases
- Optimize press releases, online newsroom and blogs
- Identify and implement opportunities for digital asset optimization
- Develop a strategy for implement link building practices in your business lifecycle
- Conduct keyword research

C Social Media: Tips to Avoid a Risk Management Nightmare

DOMINIC JAAR, President, Ledjit Consulting Inc.

With the enormous opportunities that social media offer come considerable potential risks as well. Organizations are now finding they must address this conflict in order to use social media in ways that enhance the business but also protect it. What are the risks associated with social media? What are the blogging liabilities? This session will help you understand the emerging and evolving legal privacy and disclosure issues but also what can be done to mitigate the risks.

- Overview of privacy law as it pertains to social media
- Understanding the issue of control in the social media environment
- What are the risks of being transparent and open to your consumers and employees?
- Discussing the legal liabilities for material published on the web
- How to determine which social media tools and communities to monitor and how to effectively monitor
- What are other organizations doing to deal with privacy and disclosure issues?

D Social Recruiting: Corporate Adoption of Social Media for Recruiting & Retention

PAUL DODD, Co-Founder and President & SARAH WELSTEAD, Marketing Director Head2Head Canada

- Publishing employee-generated content that shows the real soul of the company
- Using photo, video, audio sharing sites to help those stories come to life
- Using RSS to distribute this content outside of the corporate career site
- Having real FAQs sections where candidates can ask questions, get real answers
- Evolve the definition of "relationship marketing" to include building and cultivating your candidate community on your career site through real two-way exchange of information
- Encourage recruiters, hiring managers to seek out potential hires and build relationships with online communities
